It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

PROCEEDINGS.

THE sixth annual meeting of the Citizens' Law and Order League of Massachusetts convened at the Hotel Vendome, Boston, on Thursday, May 3, 1888, at 3 o'clock P.M.

The meeting was called to order by the Secretary, and in the absence of the President and Vice-Presidents, Deacon Ezra Farnsworth was elected President pro tem. The Secretary then read the report of the Executive Committee as follows: —

SIXTH ANNUAL REPORT OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

To the Members of The Citizens' Law and Order League of Massachusetts: —

We meet on the sixth anniversary of the formation of The Citizens' Law and Order League of Massachusetts, and certain circumstances seem to make it proper for us to state briefly the causes which brought our organization into existence, and to outline its work during the past six years, and refresh our recollection of the contests through which we have passed and the victories which we have won. The successful contests of the past seem to your committee to more than justify the formation of the organization and the expenditure of effort and money which has been necessary to accomplish its work, and your committee look back over the six years with satisfaction, and feel that the public appreciates and commends the work that has been performed, and they believe the public is willing to continue the support which it has generously given in the past, that the labors of the organization may be continued, that the ground that has been

At the time our League was formed, six years ago, there were twenty-six hundred licensed places for the sale of intoxicating liquor in Boston. Two thirds of these were open and doing their largest business on the Lord's day; almost all of them were selling to children of the most tender years. Indeed, the average liquor-dealer of that day had never read the conditions of his license and paid no attention to them whatever. The police force of the city of Boston was under orders to enter no saloon except to make an arrest or quell a disturbance. The law was being violated in almost every saloon every hour in the day, and in a whole year no more than six persons were punished for violation of the liquor-law.

Those who were active in bringing about the formation of the League had become enraged at the liquor-traffic because it was inviting the patronage of the smallest children in the community. The streets were constantly filled with little children, oftentimes not more than five or six years of age, carrying vessels in and out of the saloons, mingling there with dissolute and disorderly crowds of drunken men and women, being corrupted to a degree which almost insured their complete demoralization and final development into paupers and criminals.

The Law and Order League was formed. Its first act was to offer its assistance to the board of police commissioners — the officers charged by the law with prosecuting to final judgment all those who violated its provisions. They were met with the statement that the board was willing to enforce the law but that it was impossible to obtain the necessary evidence because their men were in uniform and were known, and the violations of the law were not committed in their presence. The officers of the League believed that the evidence could be obtained and that the law could be enforced. Having consulted lawyers familiar with criminal proceedings, it adopted the method of employing a corps of detectives to secure the necessary evidence to bring before the courts those persons who were violating the law. It took the precaution to determine at the outset that it would prosecute no man for any sale made to an agent of the organization, that it would never have in its employ a minor, and that it would tempt no man to commit a crime that he might be punished for it. It did not attack the violators of the law until it had given them due warning of its purpose to do so. The methods adopted have been much assailed and criticized. This is to be expected, for

“No rogue e'er felt the halter draw
With good opinion of the law,” nor of the officers or the method which brought the penalties of outraged law upon the offender. Steadily pursuing the methods adopted, in the first ten months of the work of the organization three hundred persons were arraigned upon complaints of the officers of the League for violations of the law. In nearly all the cases the defendants were found guilty in the lower courts; almost without exception they appealed. But a short time elapsed after the formation of the organization before we began to find saloons excluding children. It is a great satisfaction to us and should be such to all right-minded people that our efforts have resulted in an almost complete suppression of the sale or delivery of intoxicating liquor to children in the city of Boston. It was no part of our original purpose to do this work in the courts. Our first cases were carried to the board of police commissioners; after deliberate consultation, these officers declined to hear our complaints until we had first presented them to the municipal courts. We were sent to the courts by these officers whose duty it was to have enforced the law, and in the first three years of our work we prosecuted more persons for violating the liquor-law than all the seven hundred and ninety-one police officers of the city of Boston, and we never had more than five agents working in the city at any one time. After three years of these efforts, having demongained may not be lost, but new victories be attained in the interest of the homes of our people, and good government throughout Massachusetts.

After three years of these efforts, having demonstrated the practicability of securing the enforcement of law if those who undertook it were in earnest and determined to accomplish the results desired, our League, finding that while the source of power of the police organization remained where it was, virtually in the hands of the saloon-keepers of Boston, it would be impossible to secure the enforcement of the law at the hands of the authorities, determined to apply to the Legislature of Massachusetts to take the appointment of the police commission out of the hands of the city government and place it where we believe it rightfully belongs, — in the hands of the chief executive of the Commonwealth. The police force is an arm of the executive power of the State. The police officers are upon our streets to enforce the laws of Massachusetts especially, but a small portion of their duty lies in the direction of the enforcement of the ordinances and regulations of the city of Boston. In the year 1883-84 out of every sixty arrests made by the police force of Boston, fifty-nine were for violations of the state laws, and only one for violation of the city ordinances.

During the three years of our work we had accumulated such facts as justified the change which we proposed to the Legislature. We prepared our petitions ; we asked an appointment of a special committee to hear the case. Having secured that, we went before it and we presented such an array of facts and statistics as proved our case to the satisfaction of the Legislature, and we were successful. The new police board was established. Three gentlemen of integrity and ability were appointed. Their appointment and the method of it has been fully vindicated by the results, for we find to-day about eight hundred less places licensed to sell intoxicating liquor than were licensed by the old board. We find the law better enforced throughout the city, especially so in regard to sales to minors, after eleven o'clock at night, and on Sundays. The license fees have been increased so that with the diminished number of places the city receives a larger revenue from the liquor-traffic than ever before. More than this, such regulations have been established as compel the persons engaged in the liquor-traffic to secure their licenses before the first of May, and the money is now received in time for use instead of coming into the treasury as it previously did all through the year, necessitating its being kept over for use during the succeeding financial year.

We soon found a reason why all persons convicted in the lower courts appealed their cases. The prosecuting officer of Suffolk County, being elected by the people and susceptible to the local political influence, was in the habit of disposing of cases for the violation of the liquor-law, without trial. More than ninety-five per cent. of all the liquor cases were thus disposed of. Our League commenced an agitation for a reform in this particular. It has not yet succeeded to the full extent of its desire, but our agitation has resulted in the enactment of a law providing that none of these cases shall be disposed of without trial except on order of the court, with the result of increasing the number of convictions more than twenty times. Since the new board of police came into office, the Law and Order League has no longer conducted prosecutions in the court. Whenever our agents find persons violating the law, we now make complaint to the board of police; having proved our case there, if it is against a licensed dealer, his license is revoked, and the further prosecution of the case in court is carried on by the police officers. In the case of an unlicensed dealer, our agents, having secured the evidence, make the complaints, swear out the search warrants; a seizure follows, and prosecutions ensue upon complaint of the police officers.

During the six years that have passed many attacks have been made upon the organization. Suits have been brought against your officers, but all have been defended successfully and none are now pending. Malicious prosecutions have been made against agents of the organization, and they also have been successfully defended. The League was formed for the purpose of securing the enforcement of existing laws, and we have never felt justified in applying to the Legislature for any radical change in the law except in those particulars which make for its better enforcement. We have framed many acts and brought them to the attention of the Legislature and secured their passage, which tend to promote the more efficient enforcement of the law, and several such measures are now pending before the Legislature. If all the bills now pending shall become law, as it seems probable they will, there will be a very great diminution in the number of licensed places, which will enable the officers to keep those remaining under much better surveillance, and to compel a much better observance of the law than we have seen for many years in the city of Boston.

At the time of the formation of our organization there was a feeling of hopelessness and despair throughout the city of Boston, and to a greater or less extent throughout the Commonwealth, in regard to the enforcement of liquor laws. There was a general disposition to repeal many of the more restrictive features of the law on the ground that it was impossible to enforce them. The agitation of this organization has entirely overcome that feeling of hopelessness and despair, and it has shown to the people that it is possible to enforce these restrictive measures, and that it is not necessary to repeal them, and it is a satisfaction to us that during the six years, notwithstanding the determined efforts of the liquor traffic, no restriction of the law has been repealed, while in many ways it has been strengthened.

Very soon after the formation of our League, persons from the surrounding towns began to inquire and to ask for our assistance in forming similar associations in their towns and cities. In the six years we have aided in the formation of one hundred such branch Leagues in Massachusetts. Many of these branch organizations have changed the character of the towns in which they were formed completely. Towns which had thirty and forty liquor-saloons have enforced the law and closed the saloons, with the result of restoring peace and order. Our office in School Street has been the centre of information for all persons interested in law enforcement throughout the Commonwealth. Thousands of letters have been answered; full information given. Almost daily men have come from distant places to receive instruction and advice from our secretary in regard to the situation in their respective towns and cities. The influence that has gone from our office has resulted in giving cheer and comfort and strength to the sentiment favoring a strict enforcement of existing laws throughout the entire Commonwealth. This sentiment is growing, as is evidenced by the large increase in the membership of our organization in Boston; it has nearly doubled since our last report, so that to-day we have nearly four thousand members in the city of Boston. The tide is rising higher and higher year by year, and it is not too much to expect that the day will soon come when the law relating to the liquor-traffic will be as well enforced from the Berkshire Hills to Cape Cod, from the border-line of New Hampshire to Connecticut, as is the law against stealing. Our work has been kept up incessantly day in and day out, in cold blood, "without haste and without cessation," and it is only necessary that it shall be continued in the same spirit with the same determination which has characterized it in the past to attain complete success.

The following table will give a bare outline of the efforts of the League in the city of Boston during the past year.

SUMMARY OF WORK PERFORMED BY AGENTS.

Complaints received from citizens and investigated.....	357
Complaints and cases brought before police board.....	84
Complaints and cases brought before the courts.....	18
Number of search warrants sworn out and served.....	23

Number of licenses canceled and revoked on complaint of League..	9
Average number of agents on duty.....	4
Number of days' duty performed for branch Leagues.....	298
Number of cases in courts for branch Leagues.....	137

Number of remonstrances and objections brought before the police board.	75
Number of licenses refused on account of the League's objection....	51

The thousands of personal interviews with people from distant points desiring information in regard to the best manner of securing the enforcement of the liquor-law; the hundreds of complaints of sorrowing and suffering people whose loved ones have fallen under the ban of the drink habit; the constant drain upon the sympathy and the intellect of our executive officer, cannot be tabulated nor easily described. The work is one which has required the exercise of great tact and skill and determination, and has exacted a sympathizing, self-sacrificing spirit throughout. We believe the work has been conducted on this basis from the beginning until now. We believe the methods employed have been justified by the results attained. We feel the policy of the organization has met the approval of our best people, and we trust it may be continued so long as there is occasion for such work in this community.

Each year an increasing number of persons who desire to prevent the establishment of drinking-places in close proximity to their homes have shown the necessary courage and willingness to come forward and sign adjoining owners' objections and remonstrances. The Law and Order League has from the beginning notified the public that it will represent all persons who desire to make these objections and remonstrances, and each year our work in this direction has increased. This year we have filed more such papers than ever before. The people have been more and more coming to understand the nature of the civil damage provisions of the law, and each year the number of notices which the organization has served on behalf of persons whose relatives have the habit of using intoxicating liquor to excess have increased. These notices now generally accomplish their purpose without suits. Having during the past six years brought many suits and obtained judgments, the liquor-dealers understand now when they receive one of these notices that it is decidedly for their interest to pay attention to it and close the door against the person named in the notice. The organization is glad to serve these notices for persons suffering in their persons, property, or means of support by reason of the intoxication of relatives, habitual or otherwise, and whenever necessary the organization will bring the suits and conduct them without charge on behalf of these suffering people.

The Citizens' Law and Order League of the United States, of which the secretary of our League is also secretary, will hold its next annual meeting in the city of Boston on the twenty-second of February, 1889. The members of the League will remember that this organization was formed in the city of Boston in 1883. The Law and Order movement has now spread to every section of the United States. Law and Order Leagues exist in every State and in some of the Territories. Each year the annual meeting is represented by a larger number of organizations and a wider field of labor, and it comes back for its sixth annual gathering to the city of Boston, a strong, powerful national organization. The national League has been for two or three years endeavoring to persuade us to permit our secretary to resign and devote his time wholly to the national work. This we have not felt willing to do, but the National League has recently made a new proposition. It is that the secretary shall take a leave of absence for six months beginning immediately, from the work here in Massachusetts and devote that period to the national work. Your committee have accepted this proposition and granted the secretary six months of absence subject to your approval. Arrangements have been made by which the secretary's work can be devolved upon his assistants during his absence, and it is the belief of your committee that a change of scene and labor during this brief period will prove a much needed rest to the secretary and benefit our organization by giving him a broader view of his work and a wider influence in its execution.

During the year our honored treasurer, Hon. James Sturgis, was suddenly removed by death. No words of ours can add to the honor and esteem in which he was held in this community, nor can they fully express our deep feelings of sorrow at his loss, his loss to his family, to our organization, to many other beneficent associations, and to the public at large. We extend to his family our grateful appreciation of his services to our organization and we condole with them in their still greater loss.

The League has a small debt of about $500 resting upon it to-day. We feel that the services which it has accomplished, the enormous increase of revenue of the city which it has brought about, entitle us to urge that the amount necessary to pay off this indebtedness and to defray the expenses of the organization for the coming year shall be raised as speedily as possible, and that the officers of the organization shall, so far as it is possible, be relieved from the necessity of personal solicitation to secure the amount of money needed to carry on this good work. If every person who gave last year will voluntarily repeat his subscription immediately, it will make the work much more efficient than it has been in the past. Looking back with proud satisfaction at the record of these six years' labor, with cheerful hopes for the future, we rely upon the support of the good people in whose interest we have labored, to continue the good work for another year.

Respectfully submitted by order of the Executive Committee.

L. EDWIN DUDLEY,

Secretary and General Manager.

ARTICLE VII.

The Executive Committee may organize Branch Leagues in the several towns and cities of Massachusetts. Such Branch Leagues shall be required to report monthly, in writing, to the Secretary of this League, giving a detailed statement of their work during the month preceding. Each Branch League shall be entitled to three representatives in the meetings of this League, who shall have all the rights and privileges of membership.

ARTICLE VIII.

General meetings of this League shall be held at such times and places as the Executive Committee may designate. There shall be an annual meeting on the first Wednesday in May of each year for the election of officers, and the transaction of such other business as may be thought advisable.

ARTICLE IX.

This Constitution may be altered or amended at any regular meeting of the League, by a two-thirds vote of the members present, seven days' notice having been given of the meeting and the proposed amendment; provided, however, that at said meeting there shall be at least thirty members present and voting.

FORM OF BEQUEST.

I give and bequeath to the Citizens' Law and Order League of Massachusetts the sum of $——, to be expended under the direction of the Executive Committee of the organization, or its successors, in efforts to secure the enforcement of the restrictive features of existing laws for the regulation of the liquor traffic.

Second, To cause monthly reports of the work of this Branch League to be made to the Secretary of the Citizens' Law and Order League of Massachusetts.

Third, To fill all vacancies among officers or members which may occur by death, resignation, or otherwise.

Fourth, And, generally, to employ such means, agencies, and agents as may be deemed best to promote the interests of this Branch League, and to advance the objects for which it is organized.

ARTICLE VII.

General meetings of this Branch League shall be held at such times and places as the Executive Committee may designate. There shall be an annual meeting on the first Wednesday in April of each year for the election of officers, and the transaction of such other business as may be thought advisable.

ARTICLE VIII.

This Constitution may be altered or amended at any regular meeting of the Branch League by a two-thirds vote of the members present, seven days' notice having been given of the meeting and the proposed amendment; provided, however, that at said meeting there shall be at least members present and voting; provided, further, that such amendments shall be subject to the approval of the Executive Committee of the Citizens' Law and Order League of Massachusetts.

CONSTITUTION OF THE CITIZENS' LAW AND ORDER LEAGUE OF MASSACHUSETTS.

ARTICLE I.

The name of this organization shall be "The Citizens' Law and Order League of Massachusetts."

ARTICLE II.

The object of this League shall be to secure, by all proper means, the enforcement of the restrictive features of existing laws for the regulation of the liquor traffic.

ARTICLE III.

Membership in this League shall consist of persons elected by the Executive Committee, who concur in the objects of the League, and who shall pay a sum of not less than one dollar annually for its support. Each Branch League shall be entitled to three representatives in this League. These representatives shall be full members of this League during the time for which they are elected, and each shall pay the annual membership fee.

ARTICLE IV.

The officers of this League shall be a President, five Vice-Presidents, a Treasurer, and a Secretary, who shall also be General Manager, all of whom shall be elected at the regular annual meeting of the League, and shall hold their offices for one year from the time of their election, and until their successors are chosen.

ARTICLE V.

There shall be an Executive Committee, which shall consist of the President, the Treasurer, and the Secretary, who are declared to be ex officio members and officers of said Committee, and twelve other members of the League, who shall also be chosen at the annual meeting.

ARTICLE VI.

It shall be the duty of the Executive Committee:—

First, To provide for the raising of funds to defray all necessary and legitimate expenses of the League.

Second, To provide a suitable office for the League, and a place of meeting for the League and for the Executive Committee.

Third, To fill all vacancies among officers, which may occur by death, resignation, or otherwise.

Fourth, To appoint such standing and select committees as may from time to time be found necessary.

Fifth, And, generally, to employ such means, agencies, and agents as may be deemed best to promote the interests of this League, and to advance the objects for which it was organized. The Executive Committee is authorized to adopt such rules as it shall deem necessary for its own government.

ARTICLE VII.

The Executive Committee may organize Branch Leagues in the several towns and cities of Massachusetts. Such Branch Leagues shall be required to report monthly, in writing, to the Secretary of this League, giving a detailed statement of their work during the month preceding. Each Branch League shall be entitled to three representatives in the meetings of this League, who shall have all the rights and privileges of membership.

ARTICLE VIII.

General meetings of this League shall be held at such times and places as the Executive Committee may designate. There shall be an annual meeting on the first Wednesday in May of each year for the election of officers, and the transaction of such other business as may be thought advisable.

ARTICLE IX.

This Constitution may be altered or amended at any regular meeting of the League, by a two-thirds vote of the members present, seven days' notice having been given of the meeting and the proposed amendment; provided, however, that at said meeting there shall be at least thirty members present and voting.

FORM OF BEQUEST.

I give and bequeath to the Citizens' Law and Order League of Massachusetts the sum of $——, to be expended under the direction of the Executive Committee of the organization, or its successors, in efforts to secure the enforcement of the restrictive features of existing laws for the regulation of the liquor traffic.

PROCEEDINGS.

THE second annual meeting of the Citizens' Law and Order League of Massachusetts convened in Horticultural Hall, Boston, on Wednesday, May 7, 1884, at 2 o'clock P. M.

The president, Hon. Rufus S. Frost, called the meeting to order, and prayer was offered by Rev. William Burnett Wright.

The president then made a brief opening address, at the close of which he called upon the secretary, Mr. L. Edwin Dudley, who read the following:—

SECOND ANNUAL REPORT OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

To the Members of the Citizens' Law and Order League of Massachusetts :

You are met to-day to receive an account of the labors of your committee during the past twelve months, and to devise plans for continuing the work that has now been going on for nearly two years. Your committee has been pursuing its work upon the line marked out at the organization of the league, "asking only obedience to law," taking care that prosecutions should not be persecutions, remembering always that the end to be accomplished is the suppression of the illegal traffic in alcoholic drinks, and that prosecutions are made only as a means to that end.

It is necessary for us to speak first of the work in Suffolk County. It will be remembered that when we met to form the league, it was intended to organize for work in Boston ; but finding among our members many gentlemen of influence who did not reside in the city, we determined to call ourselves a state organization, with the belief that, if we were successful in accomplishing something in Boston, the most difficult place of all, the organization would spread through the State.

Our expectations have been realized. We numbered seventeen branch leagues at our annual meeting one year since : there are to-day sixty-one, actively at work in different cities and towns in the commonwealth.

Your committee has confined its solicitations for funds almost exclusively to residents and property-holders in Suffolk County, and funds collected by subscription have therefore been used to carry forward the work in this county. The branch leagues have raised the funds, and have borne the expenses of the work done in their several towns and cities.

In Suffolk County, the violations of the law are so common that, with the limited means at our command, we have been unable to attempt the suppression of them all. Our prosecutions during the past year, as during the previous one, have been mainly for selling to minors and on the Lord's day. We have so closely followed up those who were committing these worst violations of the law, that they have been greatly diminished. Persons engaged in making illegal sales have come to look upon every stranger who enters their doors as a possible agent of the league ; and in this way our influence is felt at all times and in all places, when and where illegal business is being done.

There can be no doubt about the necessity for continuing this work. The persons who have desisted, in consequence of our prosecutions, stand ready to resume their illegal business the moment they can feel safe from the observation of this organization.

PUBLIC OFFICERS.

While your committee feels that much greater efforts should be made by the constituted authorities to enforce the provisions of the liquor laws in Suffolk County, it has never felt inclined to criticize, much less abuse, them for their apathy and indifference on this subject, because it believes that their inefficiency in the execution of these laws is but a symptom of the disease, that the disease itself lies farther back, and is, in fact, the apathy and indifference of the people themselves. It believes that, with an organized public sentiment, demanding the enforcement of these laws with the same spirit that is shown in the enforcement of other criminal laws, we shall find the officers willing servants of the people ; and your committee has therefore regarded the prosecutions which we have made as only secondary in importance to the work of educating and combining the citizens in such manner as shall compel a faithful execution of these laws at the hands of the public officers.

There are many criticisms which might be made upon the manner in which officers perform their duties ; but we do not believe that the abuses which exist can be remedied by abusing the officers. We feel confident that the voters of Boston, as they come to realize the dangers which threaten the moral and property interests of the city, will devise ways and means to select officials whose sympathies will be with the law-abiding classes. The work of this organization has made the danger apparent to those of us who have been actively engaged in it. The constant violation of our liquor laws begets in those who violate them with impunity, a contempt for all law ; and unless the spirit of lawlessness which is abroad among the sellers and the buyers of intoxicating liquors is met with organized resistance, we feel that our condition here may ere long become as intolerable to the good citizens as it was at Cincinnati.

It is impossible, in a report like this, to give any detailed account of the work which we have done, and we can only expect to sum it up and show you some of the results. The large diminution of the sales to minors and the sales on Sunday, which must be apparent to all observing persons, we feel, amply repays for all our labors and all that it has cost. In addition to this, through our efforts the city treasury has been enriched by several thousand dollars paid in by persons holding licenses of one class, and making sales which are authorized by licenses of another class which they did not have. Upon bringing the evidence in such cases before the police commissioners, they have compelled the dealers to take and pay for a second license.

HIGH LICENSE.

Another great result has been accomplished, which the liquor dealers give this organization credit for, and that is the doubling of the license fees in the city of Boston. It is true that those who petitioned for this advance of the license fees were nearly all members of this league, and those who appeared and urged the matter at the hearing were mostly our associates. Our league is formed merely for the purpose of securing obedience to existing laws, but as individuals we feel at liberty to urge our own views upon questions of this kind outside of the organization. There can be no question that the increase in the fees would not have been made had it not been for the public interest which was manifested; and we believe that this public interest would not have been shown if there had been no Citizens' Law and Order League. This not being a question of whether or not licenses should be granted, and as the work was so largely that of our active members, we refer to it without committing ourselves upon the question of high license or prohibition. We hope that this increase of the license fees will result in decreasing the number of saloons, and we believe that the worst places will be suppressed. The chair-
Board of Police Commissioners has estimated that the revenue to the city will amount to about $250,000. This reduces the capital engaged in the liquor tion, this counter attack will but increase our resources and strength, and enable us to carry on the warfare in which we are engaged with greater vigor than ever before.

Evidence is daily accumulating that our work is having the desired effect upon a large number of those dealers who have been conducting their business in violation of the law. Many are going out of the illegal business; many others are making such changes as show that they find it necessary to bring themselves within the law.

On the whole, we feel that the efforts which your committee have put forth have been of the utmost importance to the citizens and taxpayers, and we believe that these efforts should be continued, and redoubled if possible.

FINANCE.

And lastly we come to speak of a question of great importance; it is the one of financial support. This work cannot be carried on without the judicious expenditure of a considerable sum of money. For the past two years we have asked for $10,000 a year to carry on the work: in neither year have we received the amount asked for. We are somewhat in debt now. The work for the ensuing year ought to be supported by a fund of at least $15,000; and your committee has recently adopted the plan of inviting one hundred and fifty of the most prominent citizens of Boston to become advisory members of the league, and it is hoped that those who thus connect themselves with us will also become contributors to the funds of the organization in sums of not less than $100 per annum.

At a meeting of the league held on February 22, the constitution was amended so as to admit to membership all those, both men and women, who approve the objects of the league, and contribute not less than five dollars annually to its support. It is very desirable, for many reasons, to increase the number of members. There were last year in Boston over 2,600 licensed liquor dealers. It is estimated, from the returns of the Internal Revenue Bureau, that there are 1,300 unlicensed places, making about 3,900 places in all, where intoxicating liquors are sold either in accordance with law or in violation of it. It is estimated that in addition to the proprietors of these places there are a sufficient number of other persons employed in this business to make an army of nearly 10,000 persons engaged in this one traffic in the city of Boston alone. They are all solidly united in an organization; and a large portion of them propose to pursue their business in their own way, law or no law. If this large army is to be met, fought, controlled, and conquered, it will be by an organized body of law-abiding citizens fully equal in numbers. Your committee hopes that each member of the league will use his best endeavor to recruit the army of law-abiding citizens during the ensuing year, so that at our next annual meeting it shall outnumber the law-breakers.

The convention in Tremont Temple on the 22d of February, for the purpose of stimulating public sentiment upon this question, was one of the grandest demonstrations ever held in the commonwealth. The prominence of the speakers, as well as the earnestness of their utterances, has settled all question about the propriety of the law-abiding citizens combining to support laws which the lawless are trampling under their feet.

Recently an informal gathering of prominent citizens, some of whom have not heretofore been identified with us, was held at the residence of one of our members, at which evidence appeared that the influence of the league is rapidly widening.

METHODS.

The first step to be taken in the enforcement of criminal laws is to ascertain that they are being violated. This information must be precise and particular, for it is necessary to prove the case "beyond a reasonable doubt." In the administration of other criminal laws, those who suffer from the illegal acts are willing witnesses against the offenders; but in violations of the liquor law, it is generally impossible to secure evidence from the victims.

The ideal method of enforcing the law would, doubtless, be for the law-abiding citizens of recognized standing and influence to band themselves together, and follow up the law-breakers, and when evidence was obtained, go upon the witness stand and prove the case: but we do not labor in Utopia, and we must resort to means that are practical and practicable. We have therefore employed detectives; and the success which has hitherto attended our efforts proves the effectiveness of the methods adopted.

There is a feeling among some of our citizens adverse to the use of detectives in the enforcement of this law, while no repugnance is manifested when they are employed to detect other crimes. This feeling has been fostered by organizations and individuals employing, in the past, persons to enter places and purchase intoxicating liquor, and then complaining of the seller for a crime in which the buyer was morally an accomplice. Our prosecutions are made upon evidence of sales made to persons other than our agents, which our men have not influenced in any manner. We have never employed a minor.

Your committee does not say that its agents are all and always total abstainers. We intend to have honorable, truthful, and sober men; and we have not prosecuted anybody for sales made to them.

We believe that these agents are engaged in a calling as honorable as any other, if it is honorably pursued; and we have spared no pains to secure faithful service. We deal with human agencies, and we do not expect perfection, and we have sometimes failed in our judgment of men.

The opposition regard the agents as the one vulnerable point in the league, and the assaults are always upon or through them. One man, during the year, was offered one thousand dollars to fail to recognize the dealers in a single town, against whom he had secured evidence. The agents are constantly approached with similar offers. Attempts to intimidate them by threats of violence are also common. That these threats are meant to be executed we have abundant evidence.

During the year two of our men have been savagely assaulted at Marlboro, while quietly and inoffensively pursuing the work we had sent them there to perform. Some other persons with whom we have no acquaintance have also been assaulted in Marlboro, because the persons engaged in the illegal traffic suspected them of being agents of this league.

Very lately a sewing-machine agent was most brutally assaulted in the town of Wakefield. He was not an agent of this league, nor did we know anything about him. In fact, the league had abandoned the sewing-machine business just one week before.

More recently still, two of our agents have been assaulted in Newburyport with deadly weapons, and their assailants evidently intended to kill them. After the exercise of unusual forbearance, our men drew their pistols, and prepared to defend themselves from their assailants. They were arrested and brought before His Honor, Judge Pike, and their conduct was fully approved, and they were entirely vindicated and discharged from custody. Two of their assailants have been arrested, charged with an assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill one of the agents of this league, and, after a full hearing before Judge Pike, were held to await the action of the grand jury.

Your committee feels that the community ought to become alarmed when a portion of its citizens thus combine to defy the law of the State, and determine to resort to the use of deadly weapons to prevent prosecutions which they well know they richly merit.

FOR THE LIQUOR DEALERS' BENEFIT.

We believe that all classes of citizens are interested that our work shall succeed, and none more so than those engaged in the liquor traffic. Our experience has taught us that the tendency of this business is to demoralize everybody who has any connection whatever with it, and that this demoralization falls most heavily upon those who dispense these beverages. We should benefit the liquor dealers and their families, if we could close every saloon in Boston, and drive those who are now engaged in selling these liquors to some less debasing vocation.

BRANCH LEAGUES.

As previously stated, there are now sixty-one branches of this league. The history of some of these branches would make an interesting volume. Some of them have carried forward their work by employing the trained agents used by the central organization; others have adopted methods of their own. In the town of South Framingham, the seven members of the Executive Committee secured appointments as special officers, and they have done the work of their branch league mainly with their own hands. In Watertown two special policemen of the town have obtained the evidence, and carried forward the prosecutions of the branch league there. In Stoneham one of the active men in the league is the president of a reform club. He has succeeded in inducing men having the habit of drinking to excess to join his reform club, take the pledge, and subsequently to go into court, and testify against persons who had been selling them intoxicating drink in the past, and thereby the illegal business has been very nearly suppressed in that town.

All of these branch leagues rely to a greater or less extent upon the support and assistance of the central organization, and their rapid multiplication has largely increased the work of the central office.

One of the effects of the activity of branch leagues in the near vicinity of Boston has been to drive liquor sellers out of the towns into the city.

A great change in public sentiment has been brought about by the formation of these leagues through the State. There are now sixteen in Middlesex County alone, and they comprise in their membership a large number of the most influential men in that county. The combined influence of these sixteen organizations is felt when the docket of liquor cases is reached at the Superior Court in that county. In past times the district attorney and other officers were listening to one side only of the case, — it was always the liquor dealer and his friends pleading to be let off; but now the law-abiding citizens are there, aiding the authorities in securing a just execution of the law. As a consequence, those who are guilty now receive the punishment they deserve.

It seems to your committee desirable that, at this meeting, you should discuss and develop more fully the relation between the central organization and its branches. The work done in the towns is done in the interest of the people residing there. They receive many advantages from their connection with the central organization, they add greatly to its work, and your committee feels that some return should be made in the way of a tax upon the local organizations, — a tax which would fall lightly upon each, but which in the aggregate would yield a considerable sum to the support of the central league.

By the terms of the amendment to the constitution adopted at the last meeting, each representative from the branch leagues is expected to contribute the membership fee of five dollars. If all did this, it would yield a considerable revenue; but thus far only a few branch organizations have paid this fee.

PROSECUTIONS.

The following table is an exhibit of the prosecutions conducted from the central office: —

Cases pending	13	Convicted	259
Entered during year	421	Pleaded guilty	46
		Discharged	83
		Warrants not served	7
		Cases still pending	39
	434		434

CONCLUSION.

We have pursued the work which you committed to us carefully and conscientiously. We feel that, while we may not have met your expectations in all directions, yet we have accomplished much good, and in the future we shall give to the officers whom you may choose to-day our cordial support, believing that the victories of the Law and Order League are mainly in the future instead of in the past. Many obstacles have been met and overcome, but we recognize the fact that the law-breakers' efforts are to be more persistent and dangerous, and that the most bitter antagonisms are, perhaps, yet to be met; but where the fight is hardest, the victory is the most satisfactory.

Respectfully submitted,

RUFUS S. FROST, Chairman.

LETTERS.

The secretary then read the following letters:—

BOSTON, March 10, 1884.

L. Edwin Dudley, Esq.,

Secretary Law and Order League of Massachusetts:

My Dear Sir:—You will remember that I declined a reelection as president of the Law and Order League of Massachusetts at its last annual meeting, but finally consented to one year's more service, which has now nearly expired.

My business imperatively demands more of my time, both at home and abroad, and I am compelled to relinquish much work in the humanitarian field which otherwise I would gladly perform.

Please therefore explain my position to the executive committee, and with them take active measures to secure a successor who will be ready to accept the office at the annual meeting, and oblige

Yours truly,

RUFUS S. FROST.

70 COMMERCIAL NATIONAL BANK BUILDING,

CHICAGO, May 3, 1884.

L. Edwin Dudley, Esq., Secretary, etc.,

28 School St.. Boston, Mass.:

Dear Sir:—Your circular announcement of the annual meeting of the Citizens' Law and Order League of Massachusetts was received a day or two since, and your letter of April 30 came to hand this morning. I am doubly sorry to say, for the second time, that I cannot meet the Massachusetts friends of Law and Order, pursuant to their kind invitation. I cherished the hope that I might be able to be present at your annual meeting, to be held on the 7th inst., but my hopes and endeavors in that direction are all in vain. My engagements here are such as to render it quite impossible for me to be absent before the middle of the month. During the latter part of May, or early in June, it is not unlikely that I shall be called East, and if so shall make an especial endeavor to see you.

I rejoice at your account of the progress you are making in your work, and of the splendid promise which brightens its future prospects. It is as true to-day as ever that "the blood of martyrs is the seed of the church." The assaults upon your agents can have no other effect than to deepen the public interest in your organization, and increase the heartiness of its support.

Mr. Shaffer is now on his way to Baltimore, and I hope he will be able to spare the time to be with you at your convention. With high respects and warm regards for yourself and all my other Massachusetts friends, I am,

Very truly yours, etc.,

CHARLES C. BONNEY,

President Citizens' Law and Order League of the United States.

On motion of Mr. Henry J. Darling, of Boston, the following named gentlemen were appointed a committee to nominate a list of officers for the ensuing year :—

Henry J. Darling of Boston, B. J. Thompson of South Framingham, Abel Howe of Marlborough.

B. B. JOHNSON, Waltham.	RICHARD C. HUMPHREYS, Dorchester.

The League then adjourned, to meet at Tremont Temple the same evening at 7.30 o'clock.

EVENING SESSION.

The League met, pursuant to adjournment, in Tremont Temple, at 7.30 o'clock, Wednesday evening, May 7, 1884.

The meeting was called to order by Hon. Rufus S. Frost, first vice-president, who introduced Mr. L. Edwin Dudley, secretary of the League. Mr. Dudley spoke briefly of the history of the organization, and its objects and methods.

The president then introduced His Excellency, George D. Robinson, Governor of Massachusetts, who spoke as follows:—

ADDRESS OF GOVERNOR ROBINSON.

Ladies and Gentlemen : — Surely it will not be expected of me to proceed at length to detail before you the operations of the Law and Order League. From the nature of the circumstances, you will certainly infer that I am not as well informed as the president himself, or the secretary who has lately addressed you. But I can always respond most cheerfully and heartily, and speak in support of any declaration that commands and demands obedience to law. [Applause.] We provide a Legislature and choose a Governor who, by concerted action, shall write statutes upon the book. But we must have these laws executed, or the work of the Legislature and the Governor is but a trifle. Probably there is no more serious or difficult problem in legislation in Massachusetts than the one concerning the restraint or control of the sale of intoxicating liquors. Look over the history, through the entire extent of your recollection, and you will at once agree in the statement that the problem is a question which demands the energy, and the skill, and the wisdom of men. For nine years we have had a statute that is now in force in reference to that subject. It does not reach and satisfy the demands on the one side, and it is too exacting in its demands to satisfy the extremists on the other. And yet it is the expression of the will of the people of Massachusetts in constitutional form under the law and the sanctions of the law. Now, so long as it remains an unchanged statute of this commonwealth, so long every man, woman, and child has a right to demand its enforcement, and to command obedience to it in every particular. [Applause.]

There are features in that law a few of which I desire to allude to. No sales shall be made on the Lord's Day. Who shall stand up in opposition to that? Who will show his face in any of these communities of Massachusetts, and say that he would strike down that restriction? Quietly some men will try to do it, but never defend it. Again, no sales of intoxicating liquors shall be made to a person in a state of intoxication. Common sense, decency, the right appreciation of one's obligation to another, will support that in the judgment of men. No sales to a minor,—not alone as for himself, but not to take home to parents, nor even to anybody else. Who protests against that? Do the fathers and the mothers of this community want that repealed or neglected? Ay, I believe that the men themselves, whose occupation is in the traffic of intoxicating liquors, many of them, will scorn the tempter that would lead their children to partake of those liquors. [Applause.] That is my observation in many cases. When you find a man that will look with indulgence upon his son who will take of the intoxicating cup, see if that man will stand the test when you ask him to have his daughter taught to do it. No, no. So long as there are homes, so long as there are hearts to beat within these parents' breasts for the children that are dear to them, so long the sentiments of Massachusetts will be unwavering in declaring that they shall be kept out of temptation, and that the tempter should be kept away from them. [Applause.] The school house, where the children go from day to day—the nursery of American civilization—the protection of our liberties—that should be sacred against the approach of this traffic. When the children are sent abroad to go to their school work day by day, there is no father or mother that does not feel safer when it is known that the liquor shop cannot come near that house in which they take their education. Then you go into the family, and you find, perhaps, a husband and a father indulging in the habit until he not only abuses himself but crushes every member of the household, destroying his life and theirs, squandering his means, and wronging them of their support; and the injured ones now go to the liquor seller and say "Stop," and the penalties are severe for a violation after that notice. And so one may go through the various sections of the statutes applicable to this subject, and call out important features that commend themselves to his support and that he would see on every hand enforced to the utmost. I do not touch the other question, because it is so far below that plane upon which I am now proceeding to discuss that which hardly seems worth mention—and that is the amount of payment to be made, the tax to be gathered in. If you take no other view than that, why every one who is concerned in the interests of the commonwealth, or in those of the different communities in it, and has to bear a portion of the burden of the public expense, is concerned that the provisions of this law shall be enforced, so that under it payments shall be made as required. But I pass that by because, as I say, it does not appeal directly to your sentiments and to your feelings and to your purpose, as do the other provisions to which I have alluded.

Now, whose business is it to be concerned about this law and its enforcement? The police officer alone? The judge only? Why, no; everybody—everybody. How is it in other things? Why, the other day I heard that some bank robbers had landed from the cars in the city of Worcester, coming by different routes, and evidently bent upon a common purpose; and at once everybody that would be interested in such matters was telegraphing all over the State of Massachusetts that danger might come there or there because of the presence of these men. Did they wait for the police officers of the city of Worcester? Not at all; but there was a threatening danger, and they warned the community abroad. What would you do to-night in these streets if you were convinced that an assault upon your rights or your neighbor's rights was impending? Run for the policeman necessarily? Perhaps not; show the manhood in yourselves first. There is no person in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, not one, that is not interested for the enforcement of the laws that exist; because if they are broken in one case, they will be in the other, and disorder will become the rule, and nobody's safety be secure. Is that the only danger to a community when in a city to the West a lawless mob breaks away from the control of the constituted authorities and lays in waste the property and the rights of citizens? It may be that your house will be swept away by the deluge that comes down the river's current, and it may be carried off from your sight in but a single minute. And yet the danger is just as certain when perhaps but a little trickling rivulet shall in a searching way find its path under its foundations, and little by little crumble away its support, and bring down the house as certainly as the impending flood. Our liberties are not always in the gravest danger when an open and forcible assault is made, but more oftentimes when by secret and insidious methods the purpose of an enemy lurks to destroy. Ladies and gentlemen, I submit to you that those who interest themselves in securing the enforcement of the law do not owe the people an apology for their conduct; they are not called to come before an audience and demonstrate their right; they may rather assume the attitude of commanding everybody to help them in an emergency. So, ladies and gentlemen, without any purpose to weary you, with no intention to discuss these questions at greater length, but only to express my entire sympathy in the work and my congratulations that you are engaged in it, I come here not only personally, but with all the official authority or influence that may belong to me; because I know full well that no man can be Governor in the old State of Massachusetts and do anything contrary to her traditions or her commands when he speaks in favor of temperance and good order and the enforcement of the laws. [Applause.] And it is a good many days and years away in the future when any man can long be clothed in her high power who is unfaithful to the demands that come from these high considerations. [Applause.] Ladies and gentlemen, I do not extend to you my personal thanks for your presence here to-night, because you are not here because of me, but for the reason that you are interested in this work, and you believe in this cause, and think that in its success and its prosperity the homes are safer and dearer, and you more likely to secure good and orderly and temperate and law-abiding men and women, and the city and the State be safer and better. You will get strength, not from what is said from this platform, but from the presence of one with another and the inspiration of shoulder to shoulder, and heart in sympathy with heart, bent upon a common and a blessed purpose. [Applause.]

OTHER SPEECHES.

Prof. Francis G. Peabody of Cambridge said it was refreshing to attend the meeting of a temperance society which confines itself to quiet work. That work in Cambridge is very attractive to him, in that it is instructing the good people and is something about which there can be no difference of opinion. Of the employment of "spotters" he said: The liquor dealers and a part of the community have a dislike to detective work. When a liquor dealer sees a policeman, he can adjust himself to the law, but when he sees a detective, he does not have a fair (?) chance. [Applause.] Is this employment of "spotters" an honorable proceeding? Everything depends upon how it is handled, and the League so uses it that it is honorable. He added that the League does not expect to sweep away the liquor traffic, but if it does a little more than has been done hitherto to regulate this business, it will have done a good work. It should, as it is endeavoring to do, sweep away from the innocent those insidious temptations which beset them on every hand. If these temptations were taken away from the students at Harvard, more would be done for them than can be done in any other way. He spoke of the resources of the law as being far from exhausted, and deprecated demands for further legislation until existing statutes have been fully enforced and are everywhere obeyed. But it is not the law, he said, which sustains men and women when they enter upon the work of saving others souls: it is the spirit of the Gospel. It may be said that to look for the kingdom of God upon earth is a dream, but by such a vision has every great movement been set in motion and sustained.

Rev. Christopher R. Eliot of the Dorchester District said that the work of the League is to call attention to failures to execute the law, thus arousing public sentiment in favor of its enforcement. It should begin with the respectable, the honest, the best citizens, and when these are aroused, those who are less elevated in the social scale will be properly reached, and intemperance will be restricted and finally suppressed. He would have every one feel that anything done to secure a better observance of the laws to regulate the sale of liquors is work well done.

Rev. William I. Nichols of Hingham said if there is one person in the city of Boston indifferent to the rum traffic, he would like to have that person go with him among the poor at the North End ; but little will be done for them until the liquor traffic among them is suppressed. This liquor question is at the basis of the very existence of the nation ; if it remains as it is, the country will soon be in anarchy. The only safety is in taking hold of the evil of intemperance and checking it, and the Law and Order League is going to work to do it in the right way. We owe it to the officers of the law to do something to show them that we are standing by them. There is no policeman at the North End who would not be glad to have every rumshop there shut up ; but that cannot be done except by the efforts of respectable people.

The League then adjourned sine die.

A true record,

Attest, L. EDWIN DUDLEY, Secretary.

APPENDIX.

The following addresses were delivered at the meeting held in Tremont Temple on the 22d of February, 1884.

The address of Mr. Johnson is republished here because of its practical importance as a guide to the citizens in the work of securing a better enforcement of the liquor laws.

The address of Father Osborne was delivered at so late an hour that it did not appear in the report of the meeting published in the Evening Traveller of February 23, 1884, which contains the addresses of the other speakers.

ADDRESS OF B. B. JOHNSON, ESQ.,

UPON THE RIGHTS AND DUTIES OF THE CITIZENS UNDER THE LAW.

Dr. Rudolph von Hering, Professor of Law at the University of Gottingen, Germany, says : "The end of law is peace. The means to that end is war. So long as the law is compelled to hold itself in readiness to resist the attacks of wrong (and this it will be compelled to do until the end of time), it cannot dispense with war. The life of the law is a struggle,—a struggle of nations, of the state power, of classes, of individuals.

"All the law in the world has been obtained by strife. Every principle of law which obtains had first to be wrung by force from those who denied it; and every legal right—the legal rights of a whole nation, as well as those of individuals—supposes a continual readiness to assert it and to defend it.

"The law is not mere theory but the living force. And hence it is that Justice, who in one hand holds the scales in which she weighs the right, carries in the other the sword with which she executes it. The sword without the scales is brute force, the scales without the sword is the impotence of law.

"The sword and the scales belong together, and the state of the law is perfect only where the power with which Justice carries the sword is equalled by the skill with which she holds the scales.

"Law is an uninterrupted labor, and not of the state power only, but of the whole people. The entire life of law, embraced in one glance, presents us with the same spectacle of restless striving and working of a whole nation, afforded by its activity in the domain of economic and intellectual production. Every individual placed in a position in which he is compelled to defend his legal rights takes part in this work of the nation, and contributes his mite towards the realization of the idea of law on earth."

Therefore, with this definition of law and exposition of the rights and duties of each individual, we lay down these well-known but often forgotten propositions, to wit :—

- 1st. All law comes from the same authority.
- 2d. All law is clothed with the same sanctity and power.
- 3d. The duty of the individual is the same obedience to all law.

4th. The duty of the officer and of the citizen is to see that all law is respected, and to respect a law is to enforce it.

If this is a duty, the question comes with pertinence, What is the right under the law granted to the citizen, not an officer, as to its enforcement?

As the subject matter before us to-day is that relating to the enforcement of the restrictive provisions of the liquor license law, and as some temperance people weaken the respect for its power and produce partial paralysis of the enforcing arm of government by their denunciations, I shall confine my answers to the rights of the citizen relating to that law, and those which form a part of the scheme by which it is possible to enforce it.

First, then, naturally comes a statement of the restrictive features of the law. By that term is meant only such as are expressed in the law and are a part of it, therefore law themselves.

First, then, it is absolutely prohibition, in towns and cities which vote "No" upon the question "Shall licenses be granted for the sale of intoxicating liquors in this city (or town)?"

Under this provision of the law, the right of the individual (which is always his duty) is to use his powers of tongue, brain, influence, and personal work in inducing his fellows to vote "No."

Secondly. No licenses can legally be issued until notice of the application, setting forth the applicant's name in full, the class of license asked for, a description of the premises where it is to be exercised, designating the part of the building to be used, is published in two papers, where such are published, and where none are published, the notice must be posted in at least the usual places for official notices. In either case, the posting or publishing must be ten days before the licensing board acts.

If any of these requirements are omitted, the citizen has a right to go to the court exercising jurisdiction over criminal matters in that territory, and make complaint, and cause the license to be revoked.

Thirdly. Three classes of licenses are issued allowing sales of intoxicating liquors to be drunk on the premises, known as "First, Second, and Third Class" respectively.

Either of these classes are prohibited unless the licensee has a license as a "Common Victualler or Innholder," and if any holder of adjoining property objects within the ten days of the posting or publishing of said notice, the license cannot be granted.

Thus one class of citizens hold the power and have the right to prohibit the sale of liquor next to any of their real estate, whether they own the whole or an interest therein. To this right and power the attention of corporations, churches, and Christian men is specially called.

To define one right relating to these three classes, we ask, What is a "common victualler"? What is an "innholder"?

Public Statutes, Chap. 102, Sect. 6, defines what a common victualler is in the following words: "Every common victualler shall be at all times furnished with suitable food for strangers and travellers"; and Sect. 8 provides that no such license shall be granted unless the applicant at the time of making the application has upon his premises the necessary implements and facilities for cooking, preparing, and serving food for "strangers and travellers."

Under the law citizens may see that these requirements are complied with, and the places that make a pretence of cold lunches are exposed and objections filed with the authorities against their being licensed.

And the authorities are obliged, by Sect. 1, to revoke said licenses, upon it being shown them that the licensee does not have the required implements or does not furnish meals as required.

An "innholder" is defined by Sect. 5 of the same chapter in the following words: "Every innholder shall at all times be furnished with suitable food for strangers and travellers, and shall also have upon his premises suitable rooms, with beds and bedding, for their lodgings. He shall also be furnished with stable room, hay, and provender, for the horses and cattle of his guests, when the authorities issuing the license so require."

And he must have all these things when he applies, and must continue to have the same.

Any citizen can call for any of these accommodations, and if not furnished, can cause the license as innholder to be revoked, and the revocation carries with it the revocation of the license to sell intoxicating liquors.

By requiring a compliance with these provisions, the citizens would reduce the number of licensed shops very materially. Next, the law provides that the licensing board "may at any time refuse to issue a license to a person whom they deem unfit to receive the same."

This affords the citizen the opportunity to present to the board evidence showing the character of the applicant, and why it is not such as to warrant the belief that he or she would comply with the terms of the license.

All have a full right to do this, and by so doing, many of the lowest dens would be prevented.

Upon the face of each license must be expressed the following conditions:—

First, "that its provisions shall be strictly adhered to."

Second, "that no sales of intoxicating liquors shall be made between the hours of twelve at night and six in the morning." That "no sales shall be made on the Lord's day" except in the case of an innholder, who is permitted to supply such liquor to "persons who have resorted to his house for food or lodging."

Third, that "all liquors sold shall be free from adulteration."

Fourth, that "no liquor shall be sold to a person known to be a drunkard, or to an intoxicated person, or to a person known to have been intoxicated within six months, or to a minor, either for his own use, the use of his parent, or of any other person."

Fifth, that "there shall be no disorder, indecency, prostitution, lewdness, or illegal gaming on the premises."

That those who hold the second, third, or fifth class licenses "shall not keep any other kind of liquor on the premises than those named in the license."

That "there shall be no public bars on the premises covered by the first, second, and third classes."

That the license shall describe "the room or rooms in which liquors may be sold by a common victualler, and that no liquors shall be kept, sold, or delivered in any other room."

Sixth, that "the license shall be conspicuously displayed on the licensed premises."

Seventh, that "the license shall be forfeited for any breach of these conditions."

It is then the right of each citizen to see that these contracts are complied with; that these places are not kept open during forbidden hours; that the Lord's day is respected, especially by that traffic which if allowed would do more than all other agencies to destroy its peace and the safety of its law-abiding and church-loving people.

The right to observe whether the innholders do furnish liquor to others than real guests, and to stop that.

The right to notify each liquor-dealer in your respective places of residence of the names of all persons known to be drunkards, so that they can have no excuse for a violation of the fourth clause.

It is your highest right to see that the children are not debauched by this traffic, and as the law forbids the sale to a minor for any purpose, it is an easy assertion that a minor has seldom an occasion to be in a licensed place. More than this, the twenty-fourth section of the law makes it an offence to allow a minor to loiter on the premises.

The offences named in the fifth clause of the prohibitions are of such a character that even the dealers do not claim immunity if guilty.

The Supreme Court has recently, in the case the Com. vs. C. A. Rogers, 135 Mass., put its stamp of condemnation on the public bars, so that it is your right to demand that they shall be closed.

One of the common violations of the law, and which it is your right to insist upon being punished, is one that every citizen can see for himself, without being obliged to enter the saloon or to employ detectives. Section 12 provides that "no license shall place or maintain, or permit to be placed or maintained, upon any premises used by him for the sale of spirituous or intoxicating liquor under the provision of his license, any screen, blind, shutter, curtain, partition, or painted, ground or stained glass window or other obstruction, or shall expose in any window on said premises any bottle, cask, or other vessel containing or purporting to contain intoxicating liquor in such a way as to interfere with a view of the business conducted upon the premises, or with a view of the interior of such premises, and the placing or maintaining of any of said obstructions shall of itself make the license void." Look about, and you can find places where this is violated, and finding you have the right to take out a search warrant, seize the liquors, and prove to the court a violation as above and have the liquors confiscated. A member of the present Legislature of Massachusetts was convicted of violating this clause, was sentenced by his own court, appealed to and convicted by the Superior Court, took exceptions to the Supreme Court; elected to the Legislature, while his exceptions were pending; his exceptions being overruled, he stands as a convicted criminal.

If any person brings liquor into a town where a "No" vote prevails, knowing that the same, or having reasonable ground to believe that the same is intended for sale, he may be prosecuted.

Another class of rights is set forth in the twenty-first section of the law : —

“ Every husband, wife, child, parent, guardian, employer, or other person, who is injured in person, property or means of support by an intoxicated person, or in consequence of the intoxication of any person ” shall have a right of action against any person who furnished the liquor in part or whole that caused the loss.

Beyond this you may hold the owner or lessor of the building for damages who allows the sale contrary to law.

And another step in the same direction, Sect. 25, provides that “ a husband, wife, parent, child, guardian, or employer of a person who has or may have the habit of drinking intoxicating liquors to excess, may give notice in writing, signed by him or her, to any person, requesting him not to sell or deliver such liquor to a person having such habit. If the person receiving the notice, within twelve months after receiving the notice, sells or delivers any such liquor to the person having such habit, or suffers or permits such person to loiter on his premises, a suit may be entered by either of the persons named in the section,” and proving the allegations made, damages must be assessed in a sum not less than $100, nor more than $500.

Any two citizens can cause a search warrant to issue to search any place suspected of containing liquors intended for illegal sale.

Chap. 220 of the laws of 1882 forbids the licensing of any retail liquor shops within 400 feet of a schoolhouse.

And as Chap. 100 of the Public Statutes forbids the sale anywhere without a license, it follows that it is within the power of citizens to prevent the sale within that distance of our educational institutions.

By Chap. 101, Public Statutes, all buildings, places or tenements used for the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors are declared to be nuisances, and the proprietors or owners knowing they are used for such purposes, are made liable to imprisonment in the House of Correction.

Sect. 13, Chap. 100, Public Statute, requires each licensee to furnish a bond with two sureties in the sum of $1,000, liable "to pay all costs, damages, and fines" incurred by any violations of the law. And Chap. 259 of the laws of 1882 requires each of the sureties to make a sworn statement of his property, showing that he or she is worth "not less than $2,000 over and above his debts and liabilities." The citizen has a right to examine these statements at the town clerk's office and punish if false.

The law intended that it should be enforced, and Sect. 43 provides that "a mayor, alderman, selectman, deputy sheriff, chief of police, deputy chief of police, city marshal, deputy or assistant marshal, police officer, or constable in his city or town, may, with or without a warrant, arrest any person whom he finds in the act of illegally selling, transporting, distributing or delivering intoxicating liquor, and seize the liquors and vessels."

It also goes farther, and creates a duty very commonly overlooked. It says, "The several officers aforesaid shall enforce, or cause to be enforced, the penalties provided by law against every person guilty of a violation of any law in relation to the sale of intoxicating liquor, of which they can obtain reasonable proof."

That evidently means that they shall use some means to obtain, and citizens can help them obtain, so that they will be without excuse for neglecting.

But the law goes one step farther, and makes it the right of the citizen to demand enforcement, and after that has failed offers him a reward for doing it himself. The same section provides that you may notify either of said officers of infractions of the law in writing, with the names of the witnesses, and if the officer notified fails to prosecute within two weeks, you may do it, and shall be entitled to all the fines imposed, which in no case can be less than $50.

Lest all these provisions fail, the law seeks to put the responsibility for its infraction on all who may contribute towards the same, and has wisely authorized us to hold the owners of buildings in which the violations occur responsible if they know of the same and do not themselves stop them.

By Chap. 101 you have the power to compel them to exercise that duty or suffer.

Thus it may be seen that if an individual is authorized by law to make complaint, he has the requisite power to stop the traffic, so far as it is illicit. The law provides the machinery and pays for it. First of Chit. Cr. Laws, 2d edition, says, "The object of criminal laws is not vengeance for the past, but safety for the future ; and to the furtherance of this design every citizen is bound to contribute." The plain interpretation of this is that punishment for wilful violation acts as a preventive.

Heard's Criminal Digest, page 4, says, "Every man of common right is entitled to prefer an accusation against a party who is guilty of an offence."

Page 5 says, "Persons legally entitled to prefer an accusation against a person charged with an offence are bound to exert the power with which they are invested for the security of the peace and safety of the community."

From what has been said it may be seen that our law regulating the traffic in intoxicating liquors is filled with prohibitions and safeguards, which, if enforced, would protect individuals in their persons and property, would save our children, would drive the traffic out of existence, excepting in the hotels (and most of it even there), and would be the next step to absolute prohibition, and in the speaker's judgment would tend to bring that much to be desired end to success.

We have the law, the duty of enforcing it, and the certainty of success, and a better state of things if we do it ; and it only remains for me to ask the individual citizen to "act well" his part and discharge fully his duty, to enable us soon to see the day when this curse, when this worst blight of the land, shall be disarmed, and expelled from our commonwealth.

ADDRESS OF REV. EDWARD OSBORNE,

SECRETARY MASSACHUSETTS CHURCH TEMPERANCE SOCIETY.

Ladies and Gentlemen :—I suppose that one object of this convention, of our coming here morning, afternoon, and evening, is to endorse the work of the Citizens' Law and Order League in Boston, and not simply to endorse the work done by it, but to encourage it to go forward and do new work. If we are going to endorse the work the League has done, we want first of all to know just briefly whether it has done a work that we ought to endorse. Has it done well? Does it deserve well of us? And if we are to answer this question we must first ask another, and that is, What does the League set out to do? What is its purpose? And then we must follow up with the further question, What has it done?

Now, the League sets forth, as we know, to enforce the existing laws. I think it is not possible to repeat that too often, because so many other words come in while we are speaking and so many other thoughts are suggested, that we are apt to lose sight of the main one. We are not a League to make new laws, we are not a League to make prohibitory laws, but we are a League to enforce the laws that already exist. Let us bear that in mind and keep it before us and repeat it again and again, because it is upon that platform that we can bring in men of all schools of thought, of all shades of opinion, men who are total abstainers, and temperate men who have never given these things a thought; they will all meet together upon this one platform, as citizens to enforce the law. I do think it is very important to keep that before us, and I put it before you, and am very glad to be speaking last, in order that you may take it away with you as your last thought this evening. When any come to us and say, What are you going to do? What are the new laws which you are going to make? What is the new power you want to bear upon us? None but what are brought about by enforcing the existing laws. This, then, is what the League sets out to do. Now let us ask how it has done it.

Some of us, I suppose, were not able to be here this morning, and perhaps we have heard so many good things since our secretary spoke to us this morning that we have forgotten some of them. Let me recall them to you, or tell them for the first time to those who have not heard them. What has the Law and Order League done? It has prosecuted 400 rumsellers for infringement of the law in the city; of those more than 300 have been convicted. I noticed this morning, as I sat here, that again and again when it was mentioned that a rumseller had been sent to the House of Correction, there was applause and there was laughter. Now I do not understand that laughter to mean that people are glad that a man is punished; I do not understand that laughter to mean that people think there is something ridiculous in a rumseller being sent to prison; but I understand that laughter and applause as showing pleasure because the law is being enforced, and the enforcing of that law means that children are being protected from temptation, that the Sunday is being better kept, that some, at least, of our working men and women are being saved from those temptations which are dragging them down to ruin in this world and in the world to come. So that when I think of those 400 prosecutions, of those 300 successful convictions, I am glad, because the rumsellers are beginning to feel, as we have been told again and again, that they are not going to have their own way any longer, but that there is somebody watching them. Three hundred men shall go and tell three hundred others, and they shall tell each one three hundred more, "Take care what you are about, our position is no longer safe here, we are no longer going to have our own way, there is Mr. Dudley and his League coming after us." And so I say if we establish a wholesome terror among the rumsellers of Boston, we have done something.

But that is not all. They tell us that the arrests for drunkenness on Sundays have decreased thirty-four per cent. in this year, in comparison with last year, through the work of this League and the greater efforts of the Police Commissioners combined. Think of that,—that thirty-four per cent. less men are brought up for drunkenness on a Monday morning than used to be last year.

Then there have been established forty-three branch Leagues throughout this State. In forty-three different centres there are men banded together to do the work that we are banded together to do here in Boston. The power has gone out from this Law and Order League to wake up these men around us to ask, What are you doing in Boston, and if you need it, do not we need it here? But the League has done more than that—and this seems to me the greatest work of all—it has been teaching people what the law is. I have learned more of the law controlling the liquor traffic within the last few weeks by reading some of the papers of the League and by listening this morning to what was said here, than I had ever expected to know, and here is the most important part of the work. Many of us have been accustomed—I know I have—to look upon the state of things as something we have got to expect, as unavoidable. We might talk about it, we might pray about it, but after all it was unavoidable. We have gone along the streets and seen the little children carrying the pails of beer or whiskey, and have said, "What a shame it is that children should be allowed to be put in the way of such temptation!" and we thought that nothing could be done. We have seen the drunkard staggering into the public house and coming out staggering still more, and we thought that nothing could be done. We have seen the wife dragged down into poverty because her husband when drunk had fallen and broken his leg or sustained some other injury, and have said, "What a shame it is that a woman should have to suffer so!" and have thought there is nothing to be done about it. And now we have learned that there is something to be done, that we do not want a new law to stop these things, that there is no need to sit down and fold our hands and cry about it. We have learned that something can be done, and that it is being done. We have learned this, that it is not lawful for children to go through the streets carrying those pails of beer and whiskey, that there are men at work preventing it; that it is unlawful for a man already drunk to have more drink sold to him, and more than that, that it is unlawful to sell to a man who has been drunk any time within six months before, if the seller of the liquor knows it. I would like to know how many of you knew that before I told you. What more do we want in the way of laws? Let us enforce these first. But how many of you know what it means when you say that a rumseller can be prosecuted for the damages that have been incurred under the influence of drink? Now I say this Law and Order League is going out telling us what power we have got in our hands and showing us how to use it.

I say, then, that because they have done this, because they have established a terror among the rumsellers, lessened the amount of Sunday drinking, and educated us into the knowledge of the powers that we possess and did not know, the Citizens' Law and Order League has done well, and deserves well of us.

But they have not yet done. When in a court in England once, I remember that the Grand Jury came in and made their return, and the judge took the papers from them, and then said, "You are now discharged from your duties, and the country is indebted to you for your services." I say that to-night we may only say the latter half of that sentence. The executive committee and the officers of the League come before us and present their report. "Gentlemen," we must say to them, "the country is indebted to you for your services, and now go on." Yes, the work is not done. It will not be done until it is impossible to find a drunken man locked up on a Sunday night. I hope that is not too much to expect. I look forward to the time when I shall see it. I speak strongly because every now and then I meet with things that almost make me reel when I listen to them. But two days ago a woman who had been left a widow with four little children said this to me,—and listen to me as I say it, and try and understand what it means: "I lived ten years with that husband, sir, and I never knew him to have a sober Sunday." Think of the pain, the suffering, the sorrow, the unhappy days. You know what a Sunday ought to be. We may differ in our ideas of observing Sunday. We think we have learned some different ways of observing the day from those ways in which our forefathers observed it. We may have improved or not, but we at least regard it as a day of rest and quiet home life and gentle words and holy thoughts. But this woman had never in ten years known her husband to have one sober Sunday. Would that have happened—ought it to have happened as it did, but would it have happened—if the laws of the city of Boston had been rightly enforced? You may tell me, "But if you put a stop to the drinking, the men will have the liquor at home." I say it may be so. But I do not believe that if the Law and Order League had been in existence during those ten years, and if it had been able to do that which it is wishing to do, that woman would to-day have that sad tale to tell,—that for ten years she had never known her husband to have a sober Sunday. These things are going on around about us day by day, and as men and women it behooves us to be up and doing. The children still, day after day, buy liquor, and taste it as they carry it home to father or mother who has sent them to fetch it. The work is not yet done.

Well, then, what is our part? We are here to encourage the members and officers of the League. We are here to endorse, as you have endorsed by your applause this morning and again to-night, the work that they have done.

They have done well so far, but that is not all. Will you not stand by and help them? Will you not come to the aid of the Citizens' Law and Order League in doing this work that lies before them? Do they want your help? Think how large the work is, of the thousands of the saloons in the city of Boston that defy the law, and remember that you have been told of the rich men engaged in the work. This is one reason why the work is so heavy, because of the power and position of the men who are the law-breakers. It is not a miserable poor man, who has only a few cents, and keeps a little back cellar down in some slum of the city : it is the man that commands his thousands, and can put down more money to defend himself than the League has got to prosecute every rumseller with. The work is so large and the men are so rich, the positions they hold are so great and their organization is so strong, ay, think of what we have to-day been told, that some of the very men who break the laws, and have been prosecuted for so doing, have seats in the State House among those who make the laws ; they sit there, as representatives of the people, to uphold the majesty of law in the State, and they themselves are lawless.

Can you and will you do anything to help in the work of the League ? I have read of a great fire, a dwelling-house wrapped in flames. Suddenly at the topmost window were seen human forms,—a mother and her children crying for life. Ladders were brought, but none were long enough by some six or eight feet to reach the window ; it seemed as if those trembling unfortunates must perish. A voice was heard in the crowd, and a tall and stalwart young man stepped forward : “ The ladder shall be placed on my shoulders if you will all help to hold me up.” The ladder is placed, and an eager crowd of men gather round, shoulder to shoulder, pressing together to hold up the form tottering under the weight. They hold him up, he stands firm, and one by one the poor souls in peril are brought down and saved.

My friends, souls are in danger of perishing by a worse evil than that of fire, and the Citizens' Law and Order League would fain raise a ladder to save them. What will you do ? Will you let them stand there, and try to bear the weight of the ladder upon their shoulders all alone because you do not stand around to hold them up? No; let it be your part to rally round and hold them up in the work. It may be that you cannot hold the position of an officer, nor fill a vacancy on the executive committee; but you can rally around with a word of cheer, and with sympathy and substantial help to hold up and further the work of the Citizens' Law and Order League. Give them your sympathy, encourage your secretary, give them your money to carry on the work so extensive in all its details, give them your names as members of the Citizens' Law and Order League, show, even if it be at the expense of five dollars show that you do desire to be a law-abiding citizen, and that, as far as you are concerned, you do determine that the laws shall be enforced in this matter of restricting, controlling, purifying the liquor traffic of the city of Boston.

you do not stand around to hold them up? No; let it be your part to rally round and hold them up in the work. It may be that you cannot hold the position of an officer, nor fill a vacancy on the executive committee; but you can rally around with a word of cheer, and with sympathy and substantial help to hold up and further the work of the Citizens' Law and Order League. Give them your sympathy, encourage your secretary, give them your money to carry on the work so extensive in all its details, give them your names as members of the Citizens' Law and Order League, show, even if it be at the expense of five dollars show that you do desire to be a law-abiding citizen, and that, as far as you are concerned, you do determine that the laws shall be enforced in this matter of restricting, controlling, purifying the liquor traffic of the city of Boston.

PLAN OF ORGANIZATION FOR BRANCH LEAGUES.

CONSTITUTION

of the

..... Branch, No.....

of the

CITIZENS' LAW AND ORDER LEAGUE OF MASSACHUSETTS.

ARTICLE I.

The name of this organization shall be "..... Branch No....., of the Citizens' Law and Order League of Massachusetts."

ARTICLE II.

The object of this League shall be to secure, by all proper means, the enforcement of the restrictive features of existing laws for the regulation of the liquor traffic.

ARTICLE III.

Membership in this Branch League shall be limited to..... citizens of..... Vacancies in membership shall be filled by the Executive Committee.

ARTICLE IV.

The officers of this Branch League shall be a President, a Vice-President, Treasurer, and Secretary, all of whom shall be elected at the regular annual meeting, and shall hold their offices for one year from the time of their election, and until their successors are chosen.

ARTICLE V.

There shall also be an Executive Committee, which shall consist of the President, Treasurer, and Secretary, who are declared to be ex officio members and officers of said Committee, and four other members of the Branch League, who shall be chosen at the annual meeting.

ARTICLE VI.

It shall be the duty of the Executive Committee :—

First.—To provide for the raising of funds to defray all necessary and legitimate expenses of this Branch League.

Second.—To cause monthly reports of the work of this Branch League to be made to the Secretary of the Citizens' Law and Order League of Massachusetts.

Third.—To fill all vacancies among officers or members which may occur by death, resignation, or otherwise.

Fourth.—And generally to employ such means, agencies, and agents as may be deemed best to promote the interests of this Branch League and to advance the objects for which it is organized.

ARTICLE VII.

General meetings of this Branch League shall be held at such times and places as the Executive Committee may designate. There shall be an annual meeting on the first Wednesday in April of each year for the election of officers, and the transaction of such other business as may be thought advisable.

ARTICLE VIII.

This constitution may be altered or amended at any regular meeting of the Branch League by a two-thirds vote of the members present, seven days' notice having been given of the meeting and the proposed amendment. Provided, however, that at said meeting there shall be at least — members present and voting. Provided further, that such amendments shall be subject the approval of the Executive Committee of the Citizens' Law and Order League of Massachusetts.

CONSTITUTION OF THE CITIZENS' LAW AND ORDER LEAGUE OF MASSACHUSETTS.

ARTICLE I.

The name of this organization shall be "The Citizens' Law and Order League of Massachusetts."

ARTICLE II.

The object of this League shall be to secure, by all proper means, the enforcement of the restrictive features of existing laws for the regulation of the liquor traffic.

ARTICLE III.

Membership in this League shall consist of persons elected by the Executive Committee, who concur in the objects of the League, and who shall pay a sum of not less than five dollars annually for its support. Each Branch League shall be entitled to three representatives in this League. These representatives shall be full members of this League during the time for which they are elected, and each shall pay the annual membership fee.

ARTICLE IV.

The officers of this League shall be a President, a first and second Vice-President, a Treasurer, and a Secretary, who shall also be General Manager, all of whom shall be elected at the regular annual meeting of the League, and shall hold their offices for one year from the time of their election, and until their successors are chosen.

ARTICLE V.

There shall also be an Executive Committee, which shall consist of the President, the Treasurer, and the Secretary, who are declared to be ex officio members and officers of said committee, and four other members of the League, who shall also be chosen at the annual meeting.

ARTICLE VI.

It shall be the duty of the Executive Committee : —

First.— To provide for the raising of funds to defray all necessary and legitimate expenses of the League.

Second.— To provide a suitable office for the League, and a place of meeting for the League and for the Executive Committee.

Third.— To fill all vacancies among officers, which may occur by death, resignation, or otherwise.

Fourth.—To appoint such standing and select committees as may from time to time be found necessary.

Fifth.—And generally to employ such means, agencies, and agents as may be deemed best to promote the interests of this League and to advance the objects for which it was organized. The Executive Committee is authorized to adopt such rules as it shall deem necessary for its own government.

ARTICLE VII.

The Executive Committee may organize Branch Leagues in the several towns and cities of Massachusetts. Such Branch Leagues shall be required to report monthly, in writing, to the Secretary of this League, giving a detailed statement of their work during the month preceding. Each Branch League shall be entitled to three representatives in the meetings of this League, who shall have all the rights and privileges of membership.

ARTICLE VIII.

General meetings of this League shall be held at such times and places as the Executive Committee may designate. There shall be an annual meeting on the first Wednesday in May of each year for the election of officers, and the transaction of such other business as may be thought advisable.

ARTICLE IX.

This Constitution may be altered or amended at any regular meeting of the League, by a two-thirds vote of the members present, seven days' notice having been given of the meeting and the proposed amendment.

Provided, however, that at said meeting there shall be at least thirty members present and voting.

PROCEEDINGS.

THE first annual meeting of the Citizens' Law and Order League of Massachusetts convened in Hawthorne Rooms, No. 2 Park Street, Boston, on Wednesday, May 2, 1883, at three o'clock P. M. A large number of members and representatives from branch leagues were present.

The meeting was called to order by the President, Hon. Rufus S. Frost, who made a brief address, congratulating the League upon the results of its work thus far. "When," he said, "you remember that a year ago the sight of little children carrying liquor in pails through the streets was a daily spectacle in Boston, and is now almost entirely absent; that a year ago no attention was paid to the law forbidding the granting of licenses within 400 feet of a school-house, and that we have carried the question to the supreme court and no such licenses are granted this year; that a large majority of the liquor stores in the city of Boston were selling on the Lord's Day, and that now this violation of the law is almost unknown, you will see that we have good cause for congratulation at the work of this young League." Mr. Frost related several instances of the need of such an organization, and said, "We are trying to enforce existing laws. With all shades of sentiment among us, we are united in the belief that when bad men combine to break the laws, good men should associate to enforce those laws." The President commended Secretary

Dudley and Attorney Wilson for their earnest labors, and related the following among many

INCIDENTS OF THE WORK :

The Branch League at Holliston requested us to send detectives and procure evidence against those who were violating the law in that town. The cases were made, and our Secretary went to the court and secured ten seizure warrants, and made arrangements to have them served. State officers, Manning and Seaver, and several local officers, accompanied by Mr. Dudley, proceeded with the warrants to Holliston. During the search one of our agents was severely assaulted by the mob, and the liquor he was guarding was taken from him. The result of this raid was to drive several men out of the town, and two of them are still absent.

We have twice convicted a member of the common council of Boston of selling intoxicating liquor on Sunday, and the Police Commissioners, upon our complaint, have forfeited his license. Both cases were appealed, and are still pending in the superior court. This same man was elected to the city council at the last election, and he sits in that body to-day as a member of the committee on police.

An English family arrived in this city in October last, consisting of a man and wife and two children. They had more than five hundred dollars in money. The man had been a drunkard, but had reformed and been sober for seven months previous to leaving England. Upon their arrival in this city the husband and father became acquainted with a saloon keeper on Harrison Avenue, and commenced drinking. In five weeks from that time the money was all gone, the father was at Deer Island serving a sentence for drunkenness, the mother was in the Massachusetts General Hospital, lying at the point of death, her illness caused by injuries inflicted upon her by her husband while he was intoxicated; the daughter was in a place as a servant, and the little boy in the home on Chestnut Street. Our attorney, Mr. Wilson, has instituted a suit against the liquor dealer, in behalf of the unfortunate woman, and when the case comes to trial we hope to recover a considerable sum for her.

In a town, at the instance of the branch league, we made several seizures of liquor, taking a very large quantity from a member of the board of selectmen, who, it is asserted, has, during his term of office, supplied the unlicensed dealers with the intoxicating liquor which they have been selling in violation of the law. The liquor seized was placed in the Woburn "lock-up" for safe keeping. Two nights afterwards that belonging to this selectman was stolen. None belonging to any one else was touched.

In closing, Mr. Frost read the following letter:—

MELROSE, April 29.

My dear Mr. Dudley:—

Will you please mail to "D. A. Dwight, Adams, N. Y.," any documents that will aid Jefferson Co., N. Y., in organizing a "Law and Order League?" They wish especially a "Constitution," with any printed suggestions. If there is anything to pay, I will pay it.

Yours truly,

MARY A. LIVERMORE.

Just coming from the West, I find people everywhere awakening to the need of "Law and Order Leagues." "Let's enforce what law we have!" is the watchword just now.

M. A. L.

The following report of the Executive Committee was then read by the Secretary :—

FIRST ANNUAL REPORT OF EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

To the Members of the Citizens' Law and Order League :—

GENTLEMEN: Although the organization of this League was only completed on the 13th of June, 1882, and our active operations did not begin until about the 20th of July, our Constitution has appointed our annual meeting for the first Wednesday in May. Consequently this report will cover a period of less than ten months of active work; but we believe you and the public will agree that the achievements of the League during its brief career would make an excellent showing, even for a year's labor.

The causes which led to the formation of this League, and the object at which it aims, have been so often stated, that only a brief reference to this subject will be made at this time. Year by year the laws regulating the liquor traffic had been made more and more stringent, and their enforcement had become more lax. A feeling seemed to be abroad in the community that a violation of the liquor law was something different from other crimes. The people were growing more indifferent and apathetic, and the officers of the law less rigid in the performance of their duty. Those engaged in the liquor traffic had come to regard themselves as a class privileged to violate with impunity any law passed for the regulation of their business. In many towns which had voted to grant no licenses, the bar-rooms were kept open in defiance of the law. The licensed dealers were almost universally violating the law and the conditions of their licenses by selling intoxicating liquor to minors, by selling on the Lord's Day, and to persons who were intoxicated. The provision of law requiring these places to be closed at certain hours at night was often disregarded. The thing that appealed most strongly for energetic action was the fearful corruption of the children which was being carried forward by the liquor dealers. There were many saloons which sought and encouraged the trade of very small children, permitting them to play various games for drink, and selling to them intoxicating liquor, in utter contempt of the law. Many saloons received a considerable amount of their patronage from such children, who had been sent by their parents or other persons to purchase intoxicating liquor in vessels to be carried away.

If the need for such a society had not been already felt, it speedily became manifest when our Secretary and the agents of the League began visiting the saloons to ascertain whether the law was being violated. They found in one place more than twenty boys under fifteen years of age, at 10.30 o'clock on a Saturday night, playing games for drink and purchasing any intoxicating liquor for which they pleased to ask, without hindrance. In many other places similar scenes were witnessed. We take pleasure in expressing the belief that there is not to-day in Boston a saloon-keeper who dares to permit such a congregation of children upon his premises for this purpose. The wholesome fear of the Law and Order League, which our prosecutions have inspired, has also diminished what they term the "measure trade," so much that one brewer, three months since, said that his weekly sales of lager beer had been reduced 150 barrels. Our Secretary, who endeavors to watch these matters closely and carefully, expresses the belief that there is not one sale of intoxicating liquor in Boston made to young children, where there were ten when the League began its work. A very large proportion of the patrons of the saloons are still believed to be youths, under twenty-one; but they are so near that age, that it is difficult for the agent of the League to determine the question whether they are minors or not. The fathers and mothers of the boys and girls who are being drawn down to ruin by the saloons, can put a stop to it whenever they will. If every man or woman whose child returns home under the influence of intoxicating liquor would report the facts to our

Secretary, and then come forward when needed, as a witness, thousands of homes now wretched would be made happy, and the future well-being of the Commonwealth would be promoted to an extent that is incalculable. The following table, showing the arrests in Boston on Sunday, for drunkenness, is the best illustration of the effect of our work upon the Sunday traffic.

BRANCH LEAGUES.

Almost immediately after our organization requests for our assistance began to come from cities and towns outside of Boston, and at your meeting in September last, this Committee was authorized to form Branch Leagues upon a plan which was then adopted.

Seventeen such branches have already been formed, and most of them have secured excellent results in their several localities. We are now in correspondence with persons in thirty or more towns with regard to the formation of branches, and the indications clearly point to a very rapid growth of the League throughout the Commonwealth.

It is very gratifying to us, that in the cities and towns where these branches have been formed, the most respectable and influential, and generally the most wealthy citizens, have been enlisted as members. It is also a good augury for our future, that a large portion of the members of these local organizations are gentlemen who have not been heretofore identified with any temperance society.

The prospect that branch leagues are to be formed generally throughout the State, renders it necessary that some action should be taken at this meeting, looking to the establishment of the future relation of the Central League and its branches.

In this work of propagating the League, the President, Secretary, and others have been frequently called to visit the several cities and towns to explain our objects and methods.

THE NATIONAL LEAGUE.

In November last, the officers of the Illinois State League wrote us that if we would call a convention for the purpose of forming a National League, they would come on and bring several prominent citizens of the West. Such a convention was called and held in Tremont Temple on February 22, 1883. Eight states and twenty-seven different organizations were represented, and a National League was formed. It is hoped and believed that organizations throughout the whole country, for the purpose of securing a better enforcement of the liquor laws, will prove a powerful agent in reducing crime and misery, and tend to diminish and remove some of the worst dangers which threaten the Republic. Should this organization become strong enough to close the saloon doors to all minors, the next generation will find less occasion than we of the present to concern itself about the dangers which threaten our country from those whom poverty and misery have made desperate.

RESULTS.

The following table shows the number of prosecutions entered by this League, and the disposition of the cases : —

Whole number of prosecutions entered,	222
Number convicted in lower courts,	151
Plead guilty,
Dismissed on payment of costs,	11
Sent to grand jury,	2
Acquitted and dismissed,	31
Cases still pending,	13
Search and seizure warrants secured,	29
Total amount of fines imposed,	$10,540.00

Each of these prosecutions has had the effect of making the person prosecuted more careful to observe the law, and at the same time has proved a wholesome warning to others in the same vicinity. Nearly all of these cases have been for selling to minors, Sunday sales, or sales without license.

One of the above cases was for violation of the law commonly known as the "School House Law." It was heard in the municipal court of Boston, appealed by the defendant to the superior court, heard by a jury, and taken by the defendant to the supreme court on exceptions, which court fully sustained the law.

An illustration of the usefulness of this law may be seen in the fact that in one town in Middlesex County, there were ten saloons within four hundred feet of its high school, all of which are by the decision compelled to close, and thus the children of that school are relieved from the compulsory contamination to which they have been subjected.

We have generally been accorded sympathetic co-operation by the officers of the law, and feel much indebted to the Police Commissioners of Boston for their friendly aid. We receive daily, evidence of the value of our services to such officers.

The report of the Treasurer will show the financial condition of the organization. Our work has been much abridged by the want of adequate funds, which we trust will be furnished more liberally in the future. Our opponents are fully organized and have a large amount of money at their command. To enforce law against them successfully, requires a considerable expenditure. We feel that we are securing a full equivalent for all we expend. If we can succeed in the efforts we are making, it will tend to greatly reduce taxation, will add thousands to the producing classes who would otherwise be a burden upon the public, as paupers or criminals, and at the same time thousands of homes now made wretched by drink will become cheerful and happy.

A proposition was made at the meeting in January to make an effort to find fifty gentlemen who would each contribute two hundred dollars annually. Several gentlemen have already subscribed, and we hope that the list may soon be completed, which would place our work upon a substantial basis.

HIGH LICENSE.

Believing that an increase in the fees charged for licenses would result in a better enforcement of the law, we made an application to the Police Commissioners of Boston to double the fees of last year. A hearing was had, but no change was made.

LEGISLATION.

Your Committee has made no effort to influence additional legislation upon the liquor question ; but when the liquor dealers applied to the legislature to repeal almost every feature of the existing law which places restrictions upon the traffic, we felt called upon to remonstrate. We believe our efforts in this behalf tended to assist in the result obtained — a refusal on the part of the legislature to change the liquor laws at this session.

CONCLUSION.

This brief account very imperfectly presents the history of the work done by your Committee. But you have been informed from time to time of our progress, through the press, to which we feel much indebted for its cordial assistance.

The League has grown to be a recognized power in a very short time. The organization is made, methods have been devised, and numerous obstacles have been overcome. If it is your pleasure to continue the work, much more may be accomplished in the year that is to come than has been done in the past.

Respectfully submitted,

For the Committee,

L. EDWIN DUDLEY,

Secretary.

Upon motion the report was accepted and ordered to be placed on file.

BRANCH LEAGUES.

Upon motion of Mr. B. B. Johnson, the following amendment to the Constitution was adopted, the necessary notice having been given in the call for this meeting :—

ARTICLE VII.

The Executive Committee may organize and charter Branch Leagues in the several towns and cities of Massachusetts upon the following plan :—

CONSTITUTION

of the

.....Branch, No.

of the

CITIZENS' LAW AND ORDER LEAGUE OF MASSACHUSETTS.

ARTICLE I.

The name of this organization shall be ".....Branch No., of the Citizens' Law and Order League of Massachusetts."

ARTICLE II.

The object of this League shall be to secure, by all proper means, the enforcement of the restrictive features of existing laws for the regulation of the liquor traffic.

ARTICLE III.

Membership in this Branch League shall be limited to _____ citizens of _____. Vacancies in membership shall be filled by the Executive Committee.

ARTICLE IV.

The officers of this Branch League shall be a President, a Vice-President, Treasurer, and Secretary, all of whom shall be elected at the regular annual meeting, and shall hold their offices for one year from the time of their election, and until their successors are chosen.

ARTICLE V.

There shall also be an Executive Committee, which shall consist of the President, Treasurer, and Secretary, who are declared to be ex officio members and officers of said Committee, and four other members of the Branch League, who shall be chosen at the annual meeting.

ARTICLE VI.

It shall be the duty of the Executive Committee :—

First.—To provide for the raising of funds to defray all necessary and legitimate expenses of this Branch League.

Second.—To cause monthly reports of the work of this Branch League to be made to the Secretary of the Citizens' Law and Order League of Massachusetts.

Third.—To fill all vacancies among officers or members which may occur by death, resignation, or otherwise.

Fourth.—And generally to employ such means, agencies, and agents, as may be deemed best to promote the interests of this Branch League, and to advance the objects for which it is organized.

ARTICLE VII.

General meetings of this Branch League shall be held at such times and places as the Executive Committee may designate. There shall be an annual meeting on the first Wednesday in April of each year for the election of officers and the transaction of such other business as may be thought advisable.

ARTICLE VIII.

This constitution may be altered or amended at any regular meeting of the Branch League by a two thirds vote of the members present, seven days' notice having been given of the meeting and the proposed amendment. Provided, however, that at said meeting there shall be at least — members present and voting. Provided further, that such amendments shall be subject to the approval of the Executive Committee of this League.

Such Branch Leagues shall be required to report monthly, in writing, to the Secretary of this League, giving a detailed statement of their work during the month preceding.

Each Branch League shall be entitled to three representatives in the meetings of this League, who shall have all the rights and privileges of membership.

MEMBERSHIP.

On motion, an amendment to Article III. of the Constitution, striking out the words, "one hundred and fifty," and inserting in lieu thereof, the words, "two hundred," was adopted, the necessary notice having been given in the call for this meeting.

REPORT OF THE ATTORNEY.

Mr. John T. Wilson, attorney for the League, then read the following report, which was accepted and ordered to be placed on file :—^a

Hon. Rufus S. Frost, President Citizens' Law and Order League:
—While I was in hearty sympathy with the work of the League from the time it was formed, and assisted from time to time, so far as I could, in the necessary legal work, yet I was not regularly engaged as counsel until Dec. 1, 1882, and therefore my report will only cover about five months.

The nature of the prosecutions under the liquor law has brought us in contact with the courts of inferior jurisdiction almost entirely. At first our reception was polite and formal. But as the work and intentions of the League were disclosed, and it was seen that an honest, upright, systematic and impartial enforcement of the restrictive features of existing laws for the regulation of the liquor traffic was the object in view, and that we had no friends to reward and no enemies to punish, a cordial and earnest co-operation was extended by judges and officers of all the courts where our duties led us, and an earnest desire expressed to aid us in all legitimate ways in the proper enforcement of the laws.

The prosecutions have embraced the various classes of offences under the liquor law, such as sales to minors, sales on the Lord's Day, sales to intoxicated persons, maintaining screens, liquor nuisances, and for violations of what is known as the school-house law.

The prosecution for sales to minors has had a very gratifying effect. Formerly liquor of all kinds were very generally sold to minors to be drunk on the premises, and to very small girls and boys to be carried away for the use of their parents or some other person who might chance to send. Now that is practically stopped. Many saloons have placards conspicuously displayed, "No liquors sold to minors here," and other indications point to a very wholesome respect for the law, but more particularly for the agents of the Law and Order League. The liquor-seller has learned that while he is selling to a minor, an agent of the League may be a quiet but earnest spectator of the scene, and therefore a wholesome restraint is exercised, although it is quite probable that the sales to minors are not entirely prevented; yet if a goodly portion of our youth, upon whom the duties and responsibilities of citizenship are soon to rest, can be restrained and protected from the temptations of the dram-shop, a victory will have been gained which in its ultimate results will far outshine the triumphs of the battle-field.

If the boys can be encouraged and stimulated to habits of temperance and educated to believe that it is the highest type of manhood that can withstand the solicitations of associates, and the temptations to indulge in intoxicating drink, a foundation will have been laid which in future years will be of incalculable benefit to our country.

The prosecutions for sales on the Lord's Day have been numerous enough to convince the Sabbath-breakers that violations of the Sabbath law will not be tolerated, and while the traffic has not been wholly prevented, there is necessarily a great reduction in the amount sold on Sunday, and it is confidently predicted that by the end of another year such sales will be the exception and not the rule.

Prosecutions for maintaining screens in violation of law have been instituted which involve very interesting legal questions, and if the points raised are ultimately decided so as to sustain the position taken by the League, detections of violations of the law will be much easier and the traffic will be very materially brought within the restraints of the law.

The now celebrated case of Commonwealth v. Joseph P. Whelan, in which the supreme court sustained the law of 1882, which provided that no person should be licensed to sell intoxicating liquors to be drunk on the premises within four hundred feet of any building on the same street, occupied in whole or in part as a public school, was instituted by this League. From its inception great care was taken to have the legal bearings made prominent, so that the law should have a full and fair interpretation ; at every stage the defense was alert and aggressive, and at the jury trial every effort was made to throw discredit upon the operations of the League in general, and upon this case in particular ; but the faithful and impartial discharge of his duty by the district attorney and the earnest and able argument of the cause by his assistant, M. O. Adams, Esq., carried the case successfully past its most dangerous point and enabled the law to be adjudicated by the highest judicial tribunal in the Commonwealth.

The results are far reaching and of the greatest importance. Complaints have frequently been made of the presence of loafers and drunkards around the saloons in the vicinity of the school-houses, and of coarse and filthy remarks within the hearing of scholars, and of other acts and conversation which no community that makes any claim to morality could afford to tolerate for a moment. By removing these saloons four hundred feet away, a great gain is made in banishing the contaminating associations of such places from the children. The distance is not so great as all good, law-abiding people could wish ; yet it is a step in the right direction, and paves the way for another law which shall make the distance greater, and in a radius instead of a straight line. If the children can be protected from the evil influences of intoxicating liquor until their habits and tastes have been formed, there will be less crime, misery, pauperism and degradation to record and fewer almshouses to investigate in the future.

The question is often asked, By what right does the citizen undertake to enforce the laws ; by what right does he form leagues, or other associations for the purpose of enforcing existing laws, when there are constituted authorities for that very purpose ; and by what right does the citizen arrogate to himself the power to set the machinery of the law in motion for the punishment of the criminal, when the private citizen has not been personally attacked, nor has he outwardly suffered any injury? The more emphatic questions are propounded by the law-breakers who have felt the force of the detections and prosecutions of the League, which the constituted authorities were powerless to make. A more honest and thoughtful inquiry is made by the private citizen, who, while he desires to see the law enforced, doubts the propriety or expediency of his interfering in any way with the duties or operations of the governing authorities. To the law-breaker, we answer, that there is an inherent right in every community to protect itself within the law against all forms of crimes and offences against the peace and good order of society, whether it be by electing officers through constituted forms to repress the criminal classes, or by forming associations to supplement and encourage the work of the duly elected authorities.

According to Blackstone, any private person that is present when any felony is committed, is bound by the law to arrest the felon on pain of fine and imprisonment if he escapes through the negligence of the standers-by, thus recognizing the duty of the citizen to protect the community against criminal offences, and if the crimes committed are recognized by the law as less serious, it is no less the duty of the private citizen to protect society against other offences which have been made crimes by force of statute.

To the thoughtful citizen we would answer that the elected authorities are only his servants, and if from inactivity, from an inadequate sense of the importance of the full enforcement of the law, from a powerful financial backing, or a very potent political support, a certain element of the community is suffered to conduct a business in open defiance of the law, to the great detriment of society, it is the highest duty of the private citizen to rouse himself and do all in his power, by money or by personal effort, to suppress the evil and to remove the cancer which is eating the very life of the body politic. One hundred and thirty years ago, Montesquieu, in his celebrated work, "The should rise up in wrath and do all in their power to prevent it. Shall I illustrate this by one or two instances? Last spring I went to visit a family living in the South Cove of Boston, near the Old Colony railroad station,—an aged mother, and an adult son and his wife. I had known them for two years. All drank. All had been sentenced frequently to the Island for drunkenness. But now I found the wife had some time before sunk so low as to be driven from the house and both mother and son, one after the other, had been arrested and sentenced. The home was gone. All that was left was a box and a chair or two, at the end of the entry in a wretched tenement house. Drunkenness had ruined every soul in the family.

Let me tell the first case I heard of in South Boston, where an experienced visitor among the poor found a mother and six children, some of them crying from hunger. She bought a bag of flour for a dollar for them to eat. She asked where the man was, and the wife said he was a mason, out looking for work. He was round the corner loafing in a rum shop. Presently he came home and took the flour and sold it for ninety cents and bought rum. Is not that picture terrible enough? But how infinitely sadder will it be if those children also learn to frequent rum shops in violation of law and become drunkards like their father!

The law says liquor shall not be sold to children. But when we all see the law violated openly and always, some steps must be taken to enforce the law. The League aims and hopes to arouse public interest and support, both of prohibitionists and the advocates of license, and men who like myself, take neither name, but believe that every rum shop, pure and simple, should be closed. All other laws are enforced by the police. You will hear from Mr. Dudley what and how much is being done to secure the enforcement of these laws. But the great work is to arouse public attention and to secure the support of all right-minded citizens. The press has given to the cause a strong support in Boston, and the press is the most powerful agency which modern civilization has discovered.

With great pleasure I ask you to hear what Mr. Dudley has to tell you of the work of the League, which is fortunate in securing as its secretary and chief executive officer, an earnest man, fully impressed with the magnitude of the work and of the evils, and vigilant and devoted to securing the enforcement of the law. We shall now listen to Mr. L. Edwin Dudley.
